

Survival skills: Useful animals!

During the Stone Age, people had to get everything they needed from nature. Many of the materials they needed for making tools, clothes, weapons and other things came from the animals they hunted. What uses can you think of for the different parts of this Ice Age reindeer?

Some of the parts, such as the Antler and bones, last a long time in the ground so we have good clues about how our ancestors used them, but some parts rot very fast so we have to use clues from people such as native Americans, Inuit and tribes who still live in the Northern cold parts of the world. List (or draw!) ways of using the different parts!
